Jan. 13, 2008 - PRLog -- There are a great many Catalytic Converters that are being removed from vehicles for various reasons. It may be a vehicle ready for the trip to the junk yard.. your vehicle may be acting sluggish and the converter needs to be removed.. whatever the reason, the junk or scrap catalytic converter could be worth from $40 to $200.

With so many converters being removed from vehicles they need an outlet to be recycled for the precious metals (platinum, palladium, and rhodium) contained inside. Prices are at an all time high for these metals which makes the catalysts worth a substantial amount.

Salvage yards, auto wreckers, service centers, exhaust specialists and private individuals have been utilizing a NJ based company called DynaConverter to sell their junk or scrap auto parts, specifically Catalytic Converters. DynaConverter not only purchases Catalytic Converters, but they also buy used auto cores or parts. Their current price list can be found at www.DynaConverter.com

A catalytic converter is a device used to reduce the toxicity of emissions from an internal combustion engine. First widely introduced on automobiles in the US in 1975 to comply with tightening EPA regulations on auto exhaust, catalytic converters are still most commonly used in motor vehicle exhaust systems. Catalytic converters are also used on generators, forklifts, trucks, buses, trains and other engine-equipped machines.

Many common problems with the exhaust system are related to a faulty catalytic converter.
