

Halfway Houses In Palm Beach County and Surrounding Areas

Halfway Houses in Palm Beach can be very beneficial to your recovery. Getting additional support from those in a halfway house or sober living home is a great step after drug and alcohol treatment.

Jan. 7, 2009 - PRLog -- Halfway houses in Palm Beach offer an atmosphere that is friendly, safe, and allows the addict to practice what they've learned in treatment. Most important, a halfway house offers the support of other addicts. Some might see this as the blind leading the blind, but in most cases, the residents learn from one another, are supportive, and comforted in knowing they are around individuals in the same situation. Many addicts are so fragile after coming out of treatment that early recovery is particularly difficult for them. They need the ongoing support of their peers.

Halfway houses are never a substitute for treatment. If the person is still using, they need to be put back into treatment. Halfway houses are designed to be a place for an addict to go upon successful completion of a treatment program. For this and other reasons, halfway houses have a zero tolerance for anyone coming onto the property under the influence. If this occurs, discharge is most inevitable.
