Jan. 13, 2010 - PRLog -- Bangalore: Enzen Global Solutions, a Bangalore-based energy and environmental consulting firm becomes India's first Franchise Power Distribution company in Asset light model to be accredited with the recently released ISO 9001:2008 certification by M/s Moody International.

Asset Light Model is a power distribution system in which all the assets pertaining to the distribution of electricity are owned by the Government and companies like Enzen manage the distribution.

Enzen has been certified with ISO 9001:2008 since they have been successful in achieving customer satisfaction through their services offered to clients by maintaining highly effective business processes and commitment to continuous quality improvement.

Apart from ISO 9001:2008, Enzen has also been accredited with ISO 14001:2004 and OHSAS 18001.

“These three certifications confirm that Enzen is operating a successful, safe and sustainable business. We expect to be one of the few organizations globally with a fully Integrated Management System meeting the requirements of all three standards within a single system”, says Satheesh Kumar, CEO, Enzen Global Solutions.

Enzen has been certified with ISO 14001:2004 as they have been committed to manage their operations and services by minimising their impact on the local environment.

OHSAS 18001 has been accredited to Enzen as they have been consistently promoting a safe and healthy working environment by providing a framework that identifies and controls the safety and health risks of the Enzenites.

“Our Occupational Health and Safety Management System is integrated with our Environmental System to assure a structured approach to risk management”, adds Satheesh.

These certifications are of interest to the stakeholders as well as the business community. These quality certifications will have an impact on the operational performance, which in turn will help the company in achieving its goals.
