

Plastic surgery overseas lures Australians with lower costs and high quality care

Australian CEO travels to Malaysia for a nip and tuck to combat aging.

June 18, 2010 - PRLog -- 55-year-old Lori Mcleod, a Chief Executive Officer from Queensland, Australia traveled to Malaysia for a Full Facelift, Thigh Lift and Liposuction after exercise and expensive face spas could not help her.

No stranger to cosmetic surgery, Lori has previously undergone a Tummy Tuck, Arm Lift and Breast Reduction in Australia. However, after losing 40+kg, she felt more surgery was her only option to lose excess skin and fat deposits on her body. At that time, a Facelift was not a procedure she considered despite wanting more surgery.

'I thought about going to an Aussie surgeon but the cost was just out of my league,' says Lori. She finally went ahead after lots of research about the pros and cons of surgery overseas. Of those who knew of her decision, some did not approve and but expressed jealousy and wished her luck.

The quality of hospitals and surgeons including the post-operative care she received blew her away. 'I doubt I would have received such post operative care in Australia, which is a sad thing to say.'

Months after surgery, she's been told that she looks '35 to 40-ish' and gets admiring glances at the beach. 'I'm so thrilled with my new look,' she says.

Lori chose to travel with Gorgeous Getaways, a leading Australian surgery operator. Gorgeous Getaways is founded by Louise Cogan in January 2004, and has had over 2,000 surgery clients in the past 6 years. The demand is still rising around 200% a year.

The 3 reasons why surgery holidays are becoming more popular:

1. Price – treatments are up to 75% cheaper than at home: Read comparison prices here: <http://www.gorgeousgetaways.com/about/price-comparisons.html>
2. Service – patients receive post surgery care, attention and treatments
3. Quality – all surgeries are performed in accredited private hospitals by the leading plastic surgeons.

'The phenomenal popularity proves that people are looking for an affordable alternative to plastic surgery, combined with the chance to have a luxurious tropical holiday as well,' says Louise Cogan.
