

Pacific Ridge Upper School Students Recognized at 2010 Stanford Model United Nations Conference

Students Advance Understanding of Politics and International Affairs; Take Home Four Delegate Awards

Dec. 7, 2010 - PRLog -- CARLSBAD, Calif. – Hundreds of students from all over the world assembled from November 12-14, for the 2010 Model United Nations (MUN) Conference at Stanford University. Staffed by Stanford students, the Conference hosted a variety of high school student committees that spent the weekend conversing on conflicts, events and principal actors of the international arena. 18 students, accompanied by two faculty advisors, traveled to Stanford this year to represent Pacific Ridge School in Carlsbad.

“We are so proud of all of our students who attended this year’s Stanford MUN Conference,” said Liz Grossman, faculty advisor from Pacific Ridge School. “What makes the Stanford MUN Conference so unique is its commitment to creative committees, such as the White House Panel of DC Education, Time Warner Board of Directors, and various historical committees. This deepens our students’ understanding and awareness of the world around them, and allows them to develop effective communication skills.”

To prepare for the conference, students researched and developed a position paper on each of the topics assigned to their committees. The conference’s closing ceremonies included the presentation of awards to the highest-scoring individuals and delegations. Four Pacific Ridge School students earned individual delegate awards for their respective committees, including:

Outstanding Delegate

- Tristan Saggese of Carlsbad – World Health Organization: Kuwait

Honorable Mention

- Eric Cherwin of Carlsbad – United Nations Environment Programme: United States
- Cara Hoffman of San Diego – 2015: President Barack Obama
- Trevor Nesbitt of Carlsbad – 2015: President Barack Obama

The Stanford MUN Conference is committed to creating a stimulating and enjoyable Model UN experience that helps delegates understand the complex workings of politics and international affairs. This is achieved by simulating United Nations committees and challenging crises, both of which encourage delegates to think critically and creatively, and to collaborate and compromise with each other.
