Feb. 15, 2011 - PRLog -- New Jersey has some of the harshest DWI laws in the country. If you add to the fact that you need a car to get anywhere in New Jersey then you can see a real problem if your license is revoked for six months. Ruben Scolavino, Esq. a former DWI prosecutor announces the launching of a new website that will assist those accused of DWI in any municipality in Middlesex County, NJ. Each municipality has its own prosecutors and its own sets of rules. The website gives valuable information as to how to handle being pulled over in Middlesex County." I think this website will help a lot of people." Mr. Scolavino said. He went on to say that as a former prosecutor he can understand the political pressure that current prosecutors are under with regard to DWI arrests.

DWI arrests are up all over the country because the police are cracking down because of the political pressure. In addition to loss of license, huge fines, jail time and alcohol programs are all a very real possibility in New Jersey if you have been arrested for a DWI.
