Until recently, very little concern was paid to who a Realtor truly represented in the purchase and sale of property. Realtors are now required to clearly state who they represent, the buyer or seller.

Many Realtors now specialize in representing the purchasers of property. The commissions can still be charged to the seller of the property when the agent is representing you as the purchaser. There are many agents who have a keen ability to negotiate with sellers and can be an outstanding help in your search for property. If you are already working with a Realtor, or searching for a realtor, it might be worthwhile to discuss a buyer's representation with them in depth.

Ralph Maupin of National Real Estate Network said "Realtors have access through the MLS (Multiple listing services) to every home that is listed for sale within a certain area. The best service I have seen on the Market in Michigan is the Quick Home Finder. This is the new free, quick and easy way to use the internet to search for homes on the MLS.
