July 11, 2008 - PRLog -- Khalid Habib Khan a lymphoma patient from Bangladesh -Daka was at Bangalore for his non Hodgkins lymphoma treatment in India on 12th May 2008. His non Hodgkins lymphoma treatment in India at a cancer surgery hospital of Bangalore was carried for 2 consecutive days by a recognized oncologist. Habib was detected with attack of lymphoma cancer in his spleen 5 months ago before his medical trip to India. The surgeons in his own city suggested for non Hodgkins lymphoma treatment but unfortunately at that time the hospital was undergoing reconstruction due to which the medical operations of many patients were getting delayed more over the expenditure of the medical treatment was not within the reach of Khalid who had was working as an accountant at a publishing house. At this hour he was told by one of his friends to get his non Hodgkins lymphoma treatment in India and Forerunners Healthcare helped Khalid in this task after he had visited their website and send his query to Forerunners. One of the affiliated cancer surgeon of the medical tourism consultancy did the job well and showed complete care for Khalid before and after the medical operation of Khalid during his one week stay at Bangalore for his non Hodgkins lymphoma treatment.

Non Hodgkins lymphoma treatment is done if an organ is badly affected by lymphoma, most usually the spleen requires non hodgkins lymphoma treatment if the former gets lymphoma infection. Non hodgkins lymphoma treatment is also done if aggressive lymphoma spreads in the intestines. However body scans (such as the CT scan, MRI, and PET scan), are very rarely used to classify and detect non Hodgkins lymphoma. Cure of non Hodgkins lymphoma is done mainly by chemotherapy, radiation therapy and stem cell transplants. Chemotherapy is the use of drugs to kill cancer cells. Chemotherapy for non-Hodgkin's lymphoma treatment usually consists of a combination of several drugs. Patients may receive chemotherapy alone or in combination with radiation therapy. Chemotherapy usually is given in cycles: a treatment period followed by a recovery period, then another treatment period and recovery period, and so on. Radiation therapy, also called radiotherapy, uses of high-energy rays to kill cancer cells. Treatment with radiation may be given alone or with chemotherapy to cure non Hodgkins lymphoma. Radiation therapy is local treatment, which means it only affects cancer cells in the treated area. Radiation therapy for non-Hodgkin's lymphoma comes from a machine that aims the high-energy rays at a specific area of the body specific area of the body. There is no radioactivity in the body when the treatment is over. stem cell transplantation, also called bone marrow transplantation, is offered to all patients to cure non-Hodgkin's lymphoma depending upon age, current symptoms of the patient and the availability of donor for bone marrow transplant. Stem cell transplant, or bone marrow, transplantation refers to the administration of high-dose chemotherapy followed by the infusion of stem cells.
