

Latest Spa From Blue Haven Pools Has Built-in Pop Up Tv, Home Theatre Sound And Ipod

On the eve of the Beijing Olympics, Blue Haven Pools and Spas has taken television viewing to a new dimension by introducing a large pop-up TV screen in a luxurious new spa range available for the first time in Sydney this week.

July 11, 2008 - PRLog -- It is virtually a home theatre in a spa with the family size screen rising from inside the spa wall at the touch of a button and linked with high fidelity surround sound speakers and mood lighting.

A built-in iPod cradle adds to the entertainment electronics. With the iPod-ready spas - an industry first - people can unwind to their favourite downloads, listen to the news or pod cast.

The space age spas come in either a six-seater version, ideal for the average family, or a king size eight-seater, complete with individually controlled hydrotherapy jets, comfortable lounge style seating, cushioned head rests and subtle colour lighting.

The aim is to create a home theatre mood to allow people to enjoy their TV viewing, particularly during the Olympics in an outdoors setting while having the relaxation and health benefits of a therapeutic spa.

Medical practitioners say the soothing warm water pulsating from the jets relieves stress and joint problems, particularly pain associated with arthritis.

For those who want to know the water temperature before going outdoors, guesswork is eliminated with an optional spa status indicator that works from inside the home up to one hundred meters away. It's a desirable amenity especially for winter evenings.

A wide range of spa shell shapes and colours allow home owners to match their decor while the latest trend in surrounds is away from the traditional western red cedar enclosures to a more modern architectural design.

According to Blue Haven's sales manager Ric Awadallah, "It is the most exclusive range of accessories ever offered in a home spa."

"Before we started concepts for this new line, we surveyed hundreds of home owners to find out what they were looking for in a spa." Mr Awadallah said.

Out of this consumer research, our product development team has created spas with the most desired entertainment and performance features.

People can test the latest TV spas by taking their swimmers to the Blue Haven display facilities at Minchinbury, Narellan and Vineyard.
