

Humorous Travelogue Has You Tripping Right Along

Not since National Lampoon's Vacation movies has travel been so fun. Ted Nash shares his family's humorous ups and downs in Europe and beyond in his disastrous travelogue.

April 29, 2009 - PRLog -- Honeymoon in Greece and Other Misadventures begins with a red-eye flight to Athens following the author and his wife's wedding, only to have the airline lose their luggage. But this is only the beginning of the saga of Nash's fun travels.

As his family grows, they sail among the Galápagos Islands, where there is seasickness along the way, suffer intestinal problems in Paris and Vienna, endure a terrifying water ride in Dubai, and lose still more luggage. This family's humorous trips take readers along for some exotic fun in Venezuela, England, Sweden and Bermuda, plus other countries, with yet more mundane adventures in store in the U.S. and Canada. But the real kicker sometimes comes at the end of their travels, such as when they returned home to a locked house, remembering too late that the keys were left in some faraway hotel.

About the Author:

Ted Nash is an investment banker in Toronto, where he lives with his wife, Nancy, and three children. He grew up in Montreal, enjoys traveling – even with its difficulties – and has lived in Boston, Caracas, London and Philadelphia. Nash believes that travel takes people out of their comfort zones, while allowing them to observe other cultures. He insists that laughter is the best medicine.
