Programming Services, which FXCM introduced last year, is a unique, in-house resource that builds automated trading strategies and technical indicators to client specifications. If a client can describe what they want their strategy or indicator to do, FXCM Programming Services can code it. And now, with this new pricing adjustment, it's more convenient than ever for clients to implement their own customized trading strategies and indicators.

Leveraging over a decade of forex market experience and expertise, FXCM Programming Services codes custom strategies and indicators for clients in multiple programming languages, across several trading platforms and signal packages, including MetaTrader 4,† Strategy Runner, Ninja Trader, MCFX, and FXTrek. Moreover, with the upcoming release of FXCM Strategy Trader, FXCM's first proprietary automated trading platform, Programming Services will program all automated systems for Strategy Trader at no extra charge.

At its core, FXCM Programming Service was developed to not only enhance automated trading throughout the retail trading industry, but to also eliminate the frequently contentious distance between programmers and brokers.

“Often, when traders have an issue with their automated strategy, they are stuck between their programmers, who blame broker execution, and their brokers, who blame the programmers’ code,” says Luke Quinn, FXCM Programming Specialist. “With the advent of FXCM Programming Services, clients can now use programmers that know execution. We ensure our work is able to execute to the strategy specified by the client.”

FXCM Programming Services also offers high-quality technical support and strategy consulting. Available for free half-hour consultations and capable of back testing any customized strategies and signals, FXCM programming experts are committed to delivering to clients an optimum automated trading experience.
